LAFAYETTE: THE HERO OF TWO WORLDS

The Marquis de Lafayette is often referred to as the "Hero of Two Worlds" because of his significant contributions to both the American and French Revolutions.

Lafayette arrived in America in 1777, at just 19 years old, to support the American colonies in their fight for independence from Britain. He quickly became a close confidant of General George Washington and played a crucial role in several key battles, including the Battle of Brandywine and the Siege of Yorktown. His efforts were instrumental in securing American independence, and he was celebrated as a hero upon his return to France.

Back in France, Lafayette continued his fight for liberty and equality. He was a key figure in the early stages of the French Revolution, advocating for a constitutional monarchy and the rights of citizens. He helped draft the Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen, a foundational document of the revolution. Despite facing imprisonment and political turmoil, Lafayette remained committed to his ideals of freedom and justice.

LAFAYETTE'S TRIUMPHANT VISIT TO BOSTON IN 1824

In the summer of 1824, the Marquis de Lafayette, a revered hero of the American Revolutionary War, embarked on a grand tour of the United States. Among the many stops on his tour, Lafayette's visits to Charlestown and Boston, Massachusetts, were particularly memorable.

Lafayette arrived in Boston on the evening of August 23, 1824. His arrival was met with great fanfare and excitement. He stayed overnight at the Governor's Mansion, the Shirley-Eustis House in Roxbury, as a guest of Governor William Eustis. He was invited to Faneuil Hall by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. Similar to today's commemoration, a grand procession of 70,000 people escorted him to the Boston Common. Here, he was greeted by the city's schoolchildren and received a formal welcome from Governor Eustis at the State House.

On August 27, 1824, Lafayette visited Charlestown, where he was informed about the upcoming 50th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill. This visit was a precursor to the grander celebration that would take place the following year, where Lafayette would lay the cornerstone of the Bunker Hill Monument. His initial visit to Charlestown was marked by a warm reception and a deep sense of historical significance, as he revisited the site of one of the pivotal battles of the American Revolution.

Lafayette's 1824-1825 tour of America was more than just a nostalgic journey; it was a powerful reminder of the enduring bonds between the United States and France, and a celebration of the ideals of freedom and democracy that both nations held dear.
